Reagan presents 'State of Union'

BARBARA ARMSTRONG
Special to the Universe

Reagan took a risk with regard to Iran. It did not work and for that he must assume full responsibility," said President Ronald Reagan in his State of the Union address Tuesday night. The president admitted that some of the mistakes were made in attempting to free American hostages in Iran, but he stressed it was time to move ahead as a nation and not let partisanism to weaken the nation. "Why don't we get to work?" asked Reagan in a joint session of the 100th Congress. "Because of our efforts to build America, America is a safer place. But while America is safer it is not invulnerable."

Reagan referred to last year's Iceland Summit, saying he would not allow the Soviet Union to halt his Strategic Defense Initiative then nor would he now or in the future. He said the "Wars" is a "path leading both to a safer future."

But I will need, and American negotiators in Geneva will need, Congressional support," he said keeping with the theme of his speech, which was to "get together and work."

Reagan said his new defense budget would "maintain our momentum to make up for neglect in the last decade of the 20th century." He noted that since 1970 the Soviet Union has invested $500 billion more than the U.S. on defense.

The speech, which was broadcast live from the House of Representatives before a joint session of Congress, was Reagan's sixth State of the Union address.

It marks his return to the public eye after a month's absence following the holidays and recuperation from prostate surgery.

In a brief accounting of his six years as president, Reagan noted that inflation is at its lowest point in 25 years, that prime interest is up to 7%, that unemployment is the lowest in seven years, and that 60 percent of Americans over 16 are employed.

Looking to the future, Reagan said the nation must forge ahead to the 21st century and stand up to the cynic who says America is not going to get any better. "America isn't finished, her best days have just begun."

To his cry that "the federal deficit is outrageous," Reagan received a lengthy and boisterous ovation from both parties.

"What Congress needs to do is pass a constitutional amendment that mandates a balanced budget and forces government to live within its means. States and families balance their budgets, why can't we?"

To suggestions that the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings 1988 budget balancing deadline be postponed, Reagan said, "The American people are tired of hearing excuses. Together we made a commitment to balance the budget, now let's keep it."

"The American people know we don't have a deficit because the people are taxed too little, we have a deficit because big government spends too much," he said.

The president called for reform of what he called a "social dinosaur," — the welfare program. He also said lawmakers will soon be receiving legislation "to help free the elderly from the fear of catastrophic illness."

Reagan stressed the need for an increase in the level of excellence in America, starting with school children.

Reagan also spoke out in favor of legislation authorizing school prayer. "The 100th Congress should be remembered as the one who ended the expulsion of God from our schoolrooms."

U.S., Iran in touch, discussing Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz told Congress Tuesday the Reagan administration stopped talking to Iran about U.S. arms after a meeting last month in West Germany, but that it has other ways to discuss mutual interests in containing Soviet expansion.

Shultz testified the Dec. 13 session in Frankfurt was authorized by President Reagan to underscore to Tehran "that any thought on their part that there were going to be further sales of arms, was wrong."

He assured the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at an open hearing that there no longer was "any contact in that channel." But, Shultz said, there are other points of contact.

Shultz did not identify the "other ways" the two countries could remain in touch, although he did furnish new details about the Frankfurt meeting between a two-man U.S. delegation and Iranian representatives. That session was held after Reagan declared the United States had broken off all talks with Iran about American weapons.

Shultz said the Central Intelligence Agency had notified him about the meeting after it was scheduled, "and I decided, and the president concurred, that we should proceed."

Shultz said he designated Charles Dunbar, a Parsi-speaking foreign service officer, to participate with George Cave of the CIA, and to take charge of the discussion, using "set talking points" prepared in Washington.

Afterward, Shultz said, Cave remained in Europe to visit a relative. "We later found that an Iranian interlocutor" called the CIA official to request another meeting, to transmit an Iranian response to the earlier session, Shultz said.

Design student Itamar Galili is the first exchange student between BYU and Bezalel Academy of Art and Design in Jerusalem.

From Israel to Provo, design student arrives

COLLEEN AMES
Universe Staff Writer

When BYU students travel to Provo for school, they come from over the world and use many different means of transportation. Very few of them, however, hitchhike.

But Itamar Galili, a BYU exchange student from Bezalel Academy of Art and Design in Jerusalem, Israel, did.

Galili, who is studying industrial design at BYU, sailed from Israel to Greece and from Greece to Italy. From Italy, he hitchhiked across Europe to Brussels. From there he took an airplane to New York for $100.

From New York, he rode the bus to Provo. He said the entire trip cost about $150.

This trip is only part of the adventure. "You should see my passport," he said. "My old passport was full, so I had to get a new one."

Galili has traveled all over the world. Australia, Europe, Asia and the United States are a few of the places he has visited.

"Thailand was the best," he said. "The people are wonderful, the country was spectacular and I loved the food."

Galili is from Haifa in Israel. After two years in the army — a requirement for all citizens of his country — he began his studies at Bezalel Academy of Art and Design.

"I always wanted to be a designer. I've painted since I was a little boy, but I wanted to create something functional with my work," Galili said.

Bezalel Academy is only a short distance from the new BYU Jerusalem Center and Galili said, "It's the best view of the city. It's like a five-star hotel there. I would recommend going there if you can do it. It's beautiful."

Galili is here as the first exchange student between the BYU Design Department and Bezalel Academy. He said the timing was perfect to come here.

"This exchange program was tailored for me. I wanted to travel again and I wanted to come here to study, so it worked out for me," he said.

"I wrote home telling the guys at the school I think it's great to do it, but it's a package deal. By this I mean that part of learning is traveling, observing different approaches to learning, meeting people and seeing different cultures."

The exchange student's life at BYU is full. He is taking 19 credits — all design classes. His courses include rendering, drawing, computer-aided design, and plastics.

"It's difficult to say what I think about the classes yet. The first week here was turmoil. My second week was in L.A. (Los Angeles) on a field trip with the industrial students," he said. "It will take me a month or so to get a feel for it."

"I see many similarities between the BYU design program and Bezalel," he continued. "The production methods, the intimate teacher/student relationship and the character of the studies are all very similar."

Even with his busy schedule, Galili is eager to do new things while here. At the top of his list — "I want to learn to ski."

What Galili will do after his semester at BYU isn't definite. He would like to travel to Central and South America. He plans to finish his last year of school next year, then do some freelance design.

When asked where he wants to be ultimately, Galili said, "On a yacht, sailing."

It beats hitchhiking.

Year elapses since Challenger disaster

By SHERIDAN R. HANSEN
Senior Reporter

Since the space shuttle Challenger explosion one year ago today, NASA, Morton Thiokol and many witnesses of the disaster continue to look ahead by working to restore what was lost.

Six astronauts and one school teacher were killed Jan. 28 when the shuttle exploded 73 seconds after take-off.

After the disaster, many steps were taken by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration when management was reorganized. James Fletcher, former president of the University of Utah, took over as NASA administrator.

Fletcher moved the shuttle management from Johnson Space Center in Houston to NASA headquarters, opened a new safety office and has given astronauts more control and visibility in the program, the Christian Science Monitor said.

The directors of all three major space centers have been replaced as well as all the managers directly involved with the ill-advised decision to launch the Challenger on an unusually cold morning, the article said.

The main objective of Fletcher's moves is to open up cleaner lines of authority and communication so that critical safety concerns are not again lost between space centers and management layers.

Utah's Morton Thiokol, manufacturer of the solid rocket motor used in the space shuttle, took the blame for the disaster when the motor failed. Since then, the company has designed a new baseline for the shuttle's solid rocket motor.

The baseline design will be tested and certified for flight over the next year, said Gil Moore, director of external affairs for Morton Thiokol Wasatch Operations.

He said alternative designs for shuttle insulation and O-ring materials are also being tested. With these alternatives, Thiokol will have substitutes to work with if the baseline design fails.

"The morale has improved remarkably in the past few months," Moore said. "When we began to see test results and hear predictions, we became more enthusiastic about the design. We have worked very hard this past year to make sure no shuttle disaster will be attributed to the solid rocket."

Moore said NASA's projected flight date, Feb. 18, 1988, has given employees a goal to work for and added morale.

Last January, many students throughout the country, interested in watching schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe take her first flight, witnessed the shuttle destruction.

"The whole school was watching when (the space shuttle) exploded," said Vermont Harward, principal of Provo's Canyon Crest Elementary School. "It is an experience that you never forget. It was a terrible blow to us, but with kids, you have to work your way back."

Canyon Crest has not planned any activity to commemorate the disaster.

"When something is so devastating, you recognize it, but you don't have a tendency to make a big deal of it."

However, he said the school has worked with the children to help them understand what happened and to appreciate the sacrifice the astronauts have made.

"We have looked at our space program and what it does in a positive way," Harward said. "We try to make it so it's not a terrible thing. We want them to know that we ourselves can make contributions and learn by our mistakes."

According to the Associated Press, the families of the crew members who died in the explosion hope to create space learning centers around the country as a tribute to "people who worked hard to extend the reach of the human race no matter what the sacrifice."

A letter released by the families said because of the Challenger accident, "lessons were left untaught, scientific and engineering problems were left unresolved" and American children "must once again put their dreams and their excitement about the future 'on hold'."

Possible link to W. German kidnappings

Brother of accused hijacker arrested

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Police have arrested a brother of the jailed Lebanese man accused in the 1985 TWA hijacking, security sources said Tuesday.

They said Ali Abbas Hamadi, brother of imprisoned Mohammed Ali Hamadi, 22, was taken into custody at Frankfurt airport Monday night because investigators think he may have been involved in this month's kidnapping of two West Germans in Lebanon.

"We suspect he was either involved or knows something about the kidnappings," one source, speaking on condition he was not identified, told The Associated Press. In an incident West German television said was related to the arrest, police in Saarland state shot and wounded a 23-year-old Palestinian and arrested his father and three brothers, a family member said.

Those arrested were Hamsa Kassim and three of his sons, according to a fourth son. All were neighbors of Ali Abbas Hamadi, who lived in Saarland for several years until about a year ago, according to West German television.

Kassim's 19-year-old son, who refused to give his name, told the AP in a telephone interview his family had no other connection to Hamadi aside from living next door to him.

The Kassim apartment is in the town of Merzig in southwestern West Germany, about 27 miles northwest of Saarbruecken.

The ZDF television network said the arrests may have broken a major Middle East terror ring. Prosecutors involved in the case declined comment.

Kassim's son said his father remained in police custody late Tuesday but his three brothers were released earlier in the day.

He said one brother was shot and wounded in the confusion when about 20 police officers stormed into his family's apartment late Monday.

ZDF television said the purported terrorist ring may have been responsible, among other attacks, for a June 1985 bombing at Frankfurt airport that killed three people.

Tuesdays developments marked the latest in a dramatic sequence of events since the Jan. 14 arrest in Frankfurt of Mohammed Ali Hamadi, wanted for murder and air piracy in the United States in the June 1985 takeover of a TWA jetliner.

Marcos supporters riot in streets

MANILA, Philippines — Crowds shouting support for Ferdinand Marcos built bonfires and threw rocks at police while rebels continued to control a nearby television station taken over Tuesday morning.

More than 160 rebel soldiers, about 50 pro-Marcos civilians and a few police held the complex housing Channel 7 and radio station DZBB. It was taken over in a pre-dawn coup attempt that included attacks on five military garrisons in which one rebel was killed and 16 were wounded.

Military chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said the mutineers were supporters of ex-president Marcos who wanted to destabilize the country before Monday's nationwide election on Pres. Corazon Aquino's proposed constitution, which guarantees her a six-year term.

In the streets, troops fired tear gas and smoke bombs at the crowd several times. At least six Marcos loyalists were taken into custody.

Marcos, who has lived in exile in Hawaii for the past 11 months, said he wants to return to the Philippines "to try to stifle this bloodletting." He would not comment on allegations he was behind the coup attempt.

Fear rises in Beirut, Waite still missing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fears grew Tuesday for Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, last seen eight days ago when he left for secret talks with Shiite Moslem kidnappers to seek the release of hostages.

One report Tuesday said Waite was still negotiating. Another said he was placed under house arrest by the Moslems he went to bargain with.

Archbishop Robert Runcie of Canterbury said in London he was "greatly concerned" about Waite's safety.

Waite arrived in the Lebanese capital on Jan. 12. Since then, 11 more foreigners have been abducted in Beirut. The latest, a Saudi Arabian, was grabbed by gunmen Monday night.

Police evacuated eight French teachers from Moslem west Beirut to Christian east Beirut on Tuesday. A police official said the French were taken across the capital's dividing Green Line at the request of the French government. The eight had been teaching for some time at three schools in west Beirut, said the official, who refused to be further identified.

The evacuation came after the spate of kidnappings sent the number of foreigners missing in Lebanon soaring to 26, including eight Americans.

Gorbachev wants new faces in Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, striking at the heart of the Kremlin power structure, suggested Tuesday that the nation needs a system for replacing aging members of the leadership with "fresh forces."

In a speech that lashed out at his political opponents in the old guard, Gorbachev called for multiple-candidate elections to regional party posts and suggested a review of the parliamentary election procedure.

He also proposed new laws to put teeth into his programs of reform, including legislation allowing people to sue the government and one that is rumored to give the state-run media guaranteed access to officials.

But Gorbachev also sounded a clear warning that the party is not abandoning the principle of "rule from the top" and that any broadening of elections will not include the Central Committee or its ruling Politburo.

It is unusual for a Kremlin leader to acknowledge shortcomings in the Politburo or the high levels of leadership. His denunciations indicated confidence in his power and the urgency he places on personnel issues.

Fault may plague proposed dam site

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A proposed dam on the site of a massive mudslide that inundated the tiny central Utah mountain hamlet of Thistle and destroyed nearby rail lines and a highway in 1983 may be plagued by geologic hazards, a government study says.

In the report, Irving J. Witkind, a U.S. Geological Survey scientist in Denver, said Spanish Fork Canyon may contain both a fault and a geologic structure called the "Thistle Creek diapiric fold."

The fold may have been formed in the distant geologic past when an underground mudstone formation thrust upward, causing the arching of an overlying plate and its sedimentary cover, he said.

"Additional field investigations should be completed to determine the existence of these hazards prior to any final decision about a new dam," Witkind recommended in his report.

In April 1983, a mountain of mud and rock cut off the Spanish Fork River, twisted canyon rail lines and destroyed a section of Utah 6. Backed up water formed a 3-mile-long lake that covered Thistle.

Pay cut proposal greets legislators

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A suggestion by House leaders that legislators take a 10 percent pay cut to help balance the House operations budget is getting a lukewarm reception.

House Majority Leader Nolan Karras, R-Roy, put the proposal before the House Republican Caucus on Tuesday, but lawmakers adjourned to avoid taking a vote.

Karras said afterwards he probably will bring the idea up again when the 48-member caucus reconvenes on Thursday. But he said he does not expect it to pass.

If the measure should be approved, the House would implement the pay cut only if the Senate could be persuaded to go along, Karras said.

Karras said the House was having a hard time keeping its $1.3 million budget for the current fiscal year in balance in light of across-the-board cuts in state spending imposed by the Legislature and Gov. Norm Bangert.

The House budget pays the salaries and expenses of 75 representatives, interim committee meetings and special sessions.

Individuals decide temple worthiness

Eligibility of casino owners, dealers and workers to enter the temple is first dependent upon the individual's own determination of worthiness.

In a talk in Las Vegas on Sunday, President Gordon B. Hinckley said such people could possibly receive temple recommendations.

Don LaFevre, spokesman for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said "President Hinckley made it clear that individuals themselves were to be the judge of their personal worthiness. They should look at their own lives and decide 'am I eligible?'"

In his talk, President Hinckley said "You must become the judge of your worthiness."

He also said it would not be easy to receive a recommend. "It is a little difficult, I think; in fact, I think it would be very difficult to be involved in that kind of work every day, all day, so to speak, in that kind of atmosphere and keep in tune with the spirit of the Lord, which would qualify one to say 'My life is in harmony with the gospel of Jesus Christ.' That becomes the criterion, my brothers and sisters, of worthiness to go to the House of the Lord." The final decision of eligibility rests with the local bishops and stake presidents of the church, said President Hinckley.

He said his comments did not reflect any change in church policy. "There is no switch," he said. "It was then as it is now. The question of qualification to enter the temple rests with the bishop and stake president."

LaFevre said the same guidelines apply to those who may sell alcoholic beverages in restaurants, serve coffee or tea or work in the tobacco industry.

"I think the policy is the same. The individual should look at his life and decide whether he feels he is in line with the gospel," said LaFevre.

Lie detector test 'fails'; but Hofmann 'passed'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Confessed killer Mark Hofmann's ability to pass a lie detector test has left two nationally known polygraph experts baffled, and anxious to question the dealer in bogus Mormon documents on how he did it.

Hofmann, who last Friday pleaded guilty to the bombing deaths of two people, which he said he carried out to avoid exposure of his fraudulent documents dealings, had been judged truthful during an earlier polygraph test in denying his involvement with the slayings.

Drs. David Raskin and Charles Honts, the two University of Utah polygraph experts who declared Hofmann to be truthful, wonder how he beat the test.

"It's the first case where we have an absolutely false negative error in an important case," said Raskin. "I would love to talk to him and find out if he can enlighten us as to how the test came out the way it did."

While Raskin theorizes that Hofmann likely used one of the established methods of misleading the machine, he does not rule out Hofmann simply may be an anomaly.

"Maybe there's just something peculiar about him," Raskin said. "He is an unusual person, and he fooled a lot of people. The polygraph shouldn't be singled out as the only problem with the case. He fooled the FBI lab and the vast majority of national and world experts."

For planting the Oct. 15, 1985, bombs that killed documents collector Steven F. Christensen and Kathleen Webb Sheets, wife of Christensen associate J. Gary Sheets, Hofmann was sentenced to five years to life in prison. By entering into the plea-bargain, he may have avoided the death penalty the original first-degree murder counts could have carried.

Hofmann also pleaded guilty to forging documents, many of which were sold to the Mormon Church.

As part of his plea-bargain, Hofmann promised to provide details of the crime.

When Hofmann begins talking, Raskin and Honts would like to be among the first to interview.

What's most puzzling to them is that Hofmann didn't just sneak by on the tests.

On the plus and minus scale used to gauge truthfulness, a plus 6 would be considered a clear indication the subject was not lying.

But Hofmann scored twice that — a plus 12.

"We were simply wrong," Raskin said.

Some critics believe the test was flawed mainly because Hofmann was still injured at the time of the interview. He had been seriously hurt when a third bomb exploded in his car on Oct. 16, 1985. Police believed that bombing was accidental.

Lt. Ken Thirsk, polygraph examiner for the Salt Lake Police Department, said recent trauma can cloud polygraph results.

"There would be no way I or anyone else would test someone so soon after that kind of trauma," Thirsk said. "It's better to wait. Time doesn't hurt a polygraph test; it helps it."

Honts, of course, knew of Hofmann's injuries, but he said that he decided to go ahead with the test after determining Hofmann to be sufficiently fit for the test.

Nuclear protestors arrested

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Actor Martin Sheen was among 72 anti-nuclear protesters — including 13 Utahns — arrested at the Nevada Test Site Tuesday in a demonstration marking the 36th anniversary of the first nuclear test at the desert site.

Energy Department spokesman Jim Boyer said Sheen was arrested on a warrant charging him with conspiracy to commit a crime. Sheen was taken to Beatty, Nev. Justice Court for arraignment, a court spokeswoman said.

Boyer said Sheen was arrested at a gathering point about four miles from the gates to the test site, which is 65 miles northwest of Las Vegas. Sheen was arrested at the test site during a protest last year.

More than 200 protesters were at the scene, according to security guards. Boyer said many protesters were arrested when they tried to block cars and buses carrying workers onto the site.

He said traffic was blocked for a brief period of time while arrests were made.

Contract may return steelworkers' jobs

TERI JENKS
Universe Staff Writer

Orem steelworkers could be back at the job as early as February, according to U.S. Steelworkers Union officials.

It'll be relatively few for a while," said George Gardner, president of Local 2701, "consisting mostly of steady jobs and maintenance people."

Actual start up will occur when the company makes a determination that it needs to go on production because it has orders."

A new four-year contract was presented to union members and their families at a meeting last week. Two representatives, James W. Smith, chief economist and Jim English of the legal staff, summarized contract information and fielded questions.

Steelworkers received mail-in ballots that are to be sent to Pittsburgh, Pa., by Jan. 31. Start up date depends on contract ratification by union members nationwide. Local acceptance was characterized by one worker as, "we lost a couple of skirmishes but we won the main battle."

"It isn't the best contract but it's a good one. In my own explanation, because of time and circumstances, I rate it fair to good," said Gardner.

The four-year agreement ends Jan. 31, 1991. USX-Geneva Steel Corp. announced Dec. 16, 1985 that they will be reducing production in 1989 because of a deal with a South Korean firm. The Korean firm will start filling orders in two years, possibly causing a conflict with the four-year contract.

"We hope that we can remedy that situation before it occurs. The only significant change is that they (USX) have made a pledge that they will cooperate in the funding and other cooperation in the Geneva Advisory Board's feasibility studies."

The contract calls for the same shutdown benefits as in the last contract. "Being a four-year contract, if this (a shutdown or slowdown) would occur in the time period, it would be very beneficial to those employees and their families in the community at whole, although in the long run it'd be devastating to the economy, especially the personal economy of all those people in the community."

Study may end highway lawsuit

MYLES G. MCKELL
Universe Staff Writer

Construction on Highway 189 will be halted until the Department of Transportation completes a supplemental environmental impact statement.

A federal lawsuit, filed last fall by citizens groups and other individuals, charged Utah Department of Transportation with constructing a four-lane undivided highway through the canyon that does not meet Federal Highway Administration standards.

UDOT engineers say the highway is actually a two-lane road with continuous passing lanes — not a four-lane road.

Attorneys for both sides have reached a tentative stipulation on the matter. A stipulation means the lawsuit will be dropped if UDOT is required to complete a supplemental environmental impact statement plus an assessment of endangered species in the Provo River.

The stipulation has been submitted to Dick Jones, attorney for the Federal Highway Administration, for consideration," said Constance Lundberg, attorney for plaintiffs.

If he approves the stipulation, the highway project will cease until the necessary studies have been completed," Jones said.

"We will then go into federal court and tell the judge a decision has been reached."

The case is scheduled for Feb. 9-11. Lundberg said UDOT will have to do a draft supplemental environmental impact study and an endangered species analysis on the project. This draft will be open to public comment.

Another issue of concern is the use of park land for highway purposes. "We plan to submit that question to the court on cross motion for a summary judgment," said Lundberg.

"We think it will have a definite impact on recreation use of the land."

The proposed highway construction project will take most of Rotary Park and part of Canyon Glen Park.

In 1967 a federal statute was passed requiring the state to do an analysis if park land is used for a highway.

"The basic question is whether the statute applies to any land acquired after the statute was passed, or any park land used after the statute was passed," she said.

Earlier, plaintiffs in the lawsuit stipulated that UDOT would be allowed to go ahead with five items they said were essential to the highway construction project whether a two-lane or a four-lane road was constructed.

According to Joel Hall of the UDOT District office in Orem these items include clearing out trees along the proposed right of way, relocation of the Salt Lake Aqueduct where it crosses the right of way, a channel change in the river, Provo waterline relocation and structures over the river.

Utah's schools' growth declines

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — In 1986, 13,000 new students came into the Utah public school system, down from 14,000 in 1985 — a trend that analysts say is the beginning of a gradual decline in growth expected to last into the next millennium.

With the Legislature considering a proposed tax increase to prop up an education system sagging under the weight of 432,000 students, the forecast is welcome news.

State Budget Director Dale Hatch said last year the state spent $25 million to teach the 13,000 new students.

Growth will slow to about 5,000 new students a year by the early 1990s, according to population estimates, but the enrollment won't actually start dropping until 1994.

From 1994 to 2000, Utah schools will lose 24,000 students, analysts predict.

Prof. to discuss Moroccan politics

A BYU associate professor will examine the influence of religious authority on politics in Morocco at 2 p.m. today in 238 HRCB.

Donna Lee Bowen of the political science department will speak on "The Politics of Religious Charisma in Modern Morocco."

"I will look at how this system (the Moroccan regime) has evolved on the national level and then how on the local level...you have a mirror image of the system," said Bowen, who returned from Morocco last spring.

This peripheral reflection of the national government is important in understanding Morocco, which itself sits on the periphery of the Islamic world," she said.

Bowen, who did research in Morocco as a Fulbright scholar and with funding from the Ford Foundation, researched the Islamic "brotherhood" in Morocco.

The country has had combined religious and political rule since the 17th century.

GIVE YOUR CAREER THE SAME CAREFUL ATTENTION YOU GIVE YOUR PATIENTS.

Making sure your own talents are being fully utilized is an important part of caring for others.

That's why you should consider a career as a Navy officer. We'll help you reach your goals and develop your potential faster than you thought possible.

You'll be part of a team of professionals — working on a wide variety of challenging duty assignments — in areas like general nursing, cardiac care, and operating room management.

And as a Navy nurse, you'll find we value your ability to learn as much as you do. Many continuing education courses are completely paid for by the Navy to keep you up to date with progress in your profession. You can work toward certification in areas such as critical care and obstetrics — or earn a higher degree in nursing.

You'll earn a top salary, with job security and benefits that can't be matched in the civilian workforce.

Call 1-800-517-2024 at no obligation, and find out more about today's Navy Nurse Corps. It could be a very healthy move for your career.

Continuing Ecclesiastical Endorsement

Brigham Young University, sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has a deep commitment to fostering the spiritual development of its students. Since its inception, instruction of the intellect has been coupled with programs to facilitate spiritual maturation. To that end, the Church has adopted a new procedure whereby all students will have the opportunity for an annual interview with an ecclesiastical leader to ensure continuing understanding of and commitment to the University's Code of Honor as well as Dress and Grooming standards.

Beginning January 21, 1987, forms will be available to students at campus information desks located in the Administration Building and the Wilkinson Center; the office of University Standards, 350 SWKT; the Student Life Office, 380 SWKT; all College Advisement Centers and all campus Housing offices. These forms should be taken by the student to the bishop of the ward they are attending while at BYU for a continuing endorsement interview for Fall semester of 1987. Non-members may have the interview with a minister of their faith or they may arrange for an interview through the Student Life Office.

Students should arrange to take the form to their bishop and have the interview before April 5, 1987. Bishops and ministers of other faiths conducting continuing endorsement interviews will be asked to send the completed form to the Student Life Office, 380 SWKT by April 6, 1987.

Those students who do not receive a continuing ecclesiastical endorsement from their bishop or other ecclesiastical leader will not be eligible to register for Fall semester 1987 or any semester thereafter until they receive an ecclesiastical endorsement to return.

This program is designed to help us more fully recognize the spiritual purposes of Brigham Young University by providing for an annual review of and recommitment to the standards of worthiness which the Church and our Board of Trustees have established. With your cooperation, this process will go smoothly and will result in positive outcomes for you and the University.

Regards,

Maren M. Mouritsen
Assistant Executive Vice President and Dean of Student Life

STUDENT RESPONSIBILITIES UNDER THE PROGRAM:

- All students should obtain a Continuing Endorsement Form from any of the following locations: campus information desks located in the Administration Building and the Wilkinson Center; the office of University Standards, 350 SWKT; the Student Life Office, 380 SWKT; all College Advisement Centers; and On-Campus Housing offices. The form will be available beginning January 21 1987.
- Students should read the form and provide the requested information, including the student's written understanding of and commitment to the standards of worthiness for attendance at Brigham Young University.
- Before April 5, 1987, students should take the completed form to the bishop of the ward which they have been attending while at BYU for a continuing endorsement interview. Non-members of the LDS Church may have an interview with a local ecclesiastical leader of their faith or may contact the Office of Student Life, (380 SWKT, 378-4771) to arrange for an interview.
- All interviews should be completed on or before April 5, 1987. Bishops and other ecclesiastical leaders will be asked to send the forms to the Office of Student Life (380 SWKT, 378-4771) by April 6, 1987.
- Students who do not receive continuing ecclesiastical endorsement will not be allowed to register for Fall semester 1987 or any semester or term thereafter until they receive an ecclesiastical endorsement.

OPINION

Interviews should teach Honor Code

Last week BYU's administration announced that students must now obtain an annual re-endorsement from their ecclesiastical leader in order to continue attending BYU.

The administration hopes the newly implemented policy will encourage more active involvement and communication between campus bishops (or other ecclesiastical leaders) and students.

In a letter to the studentbody, Maren M. Mouritsen, dean of Student Life, said that the new procedure should "ensure continuing understanding of and commitment to the University's Code of Honor as well as Dress and Grooming standards."

Both are laudable goals.

First, in the highly transient student wards, an annual interview would help students become acquainted with their bishops or other ecclesiastical leaders. These leaders can discuss students' goals, give them proper perspective and help them work out difficulties.

The one concern regarding the policy, is, ironically, that it may keep some students from talking to their bishop. A young man or woman who has broken the Code of Honor may already be hesitant to talk with a church leader. If a student also fears losing continuing status, he may simply avoid his bishop until the last possible moment, instead of working towards clearing up the problem.

Though no one who transgresses should think themselves exempt from formal church action, people who run into difficulties should not have the added fear of being expelled from school. Such interviews must play a building and not a retributive role.

Second, the interviews must educate. Ecclesiastical leaders can help students understand that abiding by the Code of Honor means much more than whether or not we wear socks. Students should understand that BYU's code of ethics involves honesty in business dealings, treating fellow students and teachers respectfully and serving the needy.

The Code of Honor also commits students to use BYU's wealth of resources to develop themselves to their fullest spiritual, intellectual and professional capacity. The entire Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints sacrifices that students might become a strength to the world and to the Church. A yearly interview will help students and BYU achieve their high potential.

The above is the opinion of the Editorial Board of the Daily Universe, which consists of the editor, the editorial page editor, a student staff member, a teacher of opinion writing and the associate publisher; the opinions expressed are not necessarily those of Brigham Young University, its administration, its student body or sponsoring church. The Board meets Thursdays at 1 p.m. in 562 ELWC. The meeting is open to the public.

Exotic beliefs are accepted more readily than U.S. beliefs

Americans today can more readily accept foreign and exotic beliefs and lifestyles than they can accept those which face us at home.

In this year's U.S. Film Festival there were two films that demonstrated this fact: "Sherman's March" (which won the grand prize award for best documentary) and "Forest of Bliss."

Both are documentaries and both are well made in different and unique styles.

"Sherman's March" is a funny, unintentional document of filmmaker Ross McElwee's love life as he attempts to make a historical documentary.

In the movie, he tours Civil War battlegrounds in an attempt to follow General Sherman's devastating march through Georgia. Instead he follows his trail of romantic devastation as he strikes up new relationships or tries to rekindle old flames.

During one of these interludes, McElwee is introduced to a girl who eventually identifies herself as a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

At this point, the audience (comprised of film industry people from across the nation and also Utah filmgoers) erupted into loud, sarcastic laughter.

The audience reaction got worse as the girl proceeded to explain about the church and her beliefs. She bore her testimony and eventually concluded by saying that she didn't feel she could see him anymore because she wanted the person she married to be able to bring the "priesthood" into the home.

When she said this, the crowd loudly expressed their amusement at what they considered to be the poor, confused nature of this girl. Women especially considered the statement about the priesthood to be funny.

But such comment was not limited to the LDS Church, the same reaction (although more subdued) came from the audience when the filmmaker, in a different part of the movie, met a born-again Christian who was into survivalism.

But audiences, in general, reacted like this only to American religious scenes.

During "Forest of Bliss," (an almost indescribable film that has no narration, dialogue or discernable storyline) a similar audience reacted with dignity and respect to a movie that showed the people of India in the ways they handled their religious beliefs and death.

The film was filled with violent and shocking moments of filth and starvation in the streets. There was great poverty and sexism as well as many unusual (and repulsive and unsanitary in an American context) religious rituals.

One of the opening scenes is a shot of vicious dogs circling a wounded dog. Suddenly one of the circling animals lunges in and grabs the wounded dog's throat in his jaws and whips it around until it dies.

Another shot shows a dog chewing on a dead body floating in a river.

From the audience there were no laughs or catcalls during the film — instead there seemed to be a quiet fascination and desire to learn.

In real life, if we see an American on the street dressed in white cotton robes with a pony tail sticking out of a bald head chanting about "Krishna" — we automatically tend to shun and avoid that person.

But if we meet somebody from a foreign land who dresses and acts similarly to the American believer in Krishna, we somehow tend to become hospitable and often want to learn more about them.

Although it can be argued that since truth is a solid and unchanging aspect of life and that those who have it need not take into account the uninformed prejudices of others, the problem becomes that those who deal with the world with this attitude completely eliminate those with uninformed prejudices from their sphere of influence and preach only to the previously converted.

If we — as participants in BYU (itself an unusual institution in society) — expect to be treated with tolerance and patience when expressing our beliefs.

We need to search within ourselves and find where our own prejudices lie so that we are not caught off-guard when they are thrown back at us.

We are all brothers regardless of race

Viewpoints
By Liznoel Duncan, president of Response and junior majoring in psychology.

I recently read an interview in the Christian Science Monitor with Richard Butler, the Aryan Nations leader in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. As I was reading this article I felt sorry for Mr. Butler. He believes that he is superior because he is of the "white" race. His hatred has probably caused him much unhappiness. I guess the greatness of our nation is that we are free to believe whatever we chose. But, when certain beliefs interfere with our goals as a nation and inhibit the rights of other citizens, especially through violence, I believe something must be done. The old saying is: united we stand, divided we fall.

Mr. Butler is the leader of The Church of Jesus Christ Christian which preaches the doctrine of Christian identity. This doctrine is a common belief held by white supremacist groups; it seems to help them add credibility to their goals. They believe that the white race is God's chosen people and that they are the descendants of the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel. The Jewish descendants are believed to be impostors and are considered the children of Satan. The black race is considered a mistake by God before he created Adam.

I disagree with this "religious doctrine," as should others who call themselves Christians. If there was only supposed to be one perfect race, why didn't God destroy the mistake and then create the perfect race? However, more than one race was created, and we are all God's children and we must behave like God's children. Obviously we can't always agree with each other. But, we must learn to accept others' differences.

In the New Testament Jesus explains that the most important commandment is, "And thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength this is the first commandment. A the second is like, namely this, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these' (Mark 12:30-31). If we truly love the Lord we must unconditionally love one another.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Real world?

Editor:

Throughout the fall semester of 1986, I worked for BYU in one of their many departments. Knowing I would need a job to fund my education I came to school a month early in search of a job. Because of my early arrival, the job placement service on campus did a great job in helping me find employment. I had an interview within 15 minutes; 30 minutes later I had a job. I'm writing to vent my frustration in the discourteous manner which I was released from my job.

The three requirements for the job were: be able to lift 90 lbs. overhead, work a morning shift, and remain at BYU for the winter semester. The last requirement for the job was heavily stressed in the interview, and up until that time I was undecided about staying a second semester. However, I gave my word I would stay. The first week of winter semester I received a call from my boss informing me that after reviewing his paperwork and order forms my services were no longer needed, but he assured me that a hard-working, punctual young man like myself should be able to find employment elsewhere.

Now I sit in a long job line in the basement of the administration building wondering if I should be standing in a different line, the financial aid line. My schedule is limited to all afternoon classes, I will soon be behind on my housing payment, I've put off my mission for months and sitting here I remember all this is the result of a gentleman's agreement to remain at the 'Y' to work at the job I don't currently hold. I've been denied of the opportunity of having time to correct the situation; job lines are long, housing contracts are not selling, and my registration fees have been paid for winter semester 1987. Have I been treated unfairly, or is this experience just a welcome to the real world?

Get out of my way

Editor:

I just read Kristi Lalli's article about student reaction to the so-called "new" reendorsement policy. I can see why some students foresee "problems," but I'm convinced they're not seeing the issue clearly.

Some students think the new policy is just too much of a hassle for our bishops. In normal wards, bishops are supposed to interview each member at least once a year (and tithing settlement doesn't count as an interview). Why should things be any different in a student ward?

Some students claim that an Honor Code violator was, is and always will be such and an interview could never change that. Whether or not an interview will change the violator is beside the point. The interview will determine if the student will be returning to BYU or not. Anyone can see that BYU is already a crowded place. I say that if anyone doesn't want to take the Honor Code (which he signed) seriously, then get him out of my way! Get him out of the full class sections that I want to add! Get him out of the long lines that I have to wait in! A bishop can help guide a student to upgrade his personal standards. That's part of his job. Meanwhile, a bishop must also revoke his endorsement of a "violator" so that the more committed students can attend BYU.

If BYU is going to have high standards and such a unique Code of Honor, then let the University show that it's serious about its policies. The standards weren't set just so that people could make fun of "the school owned by the Mormon Church." I'm tired of hearing from people who think they're exempt from one gospel principle because they're so devoted to another. My father was recently assigned to home teach a temple worker, but the temple worker will never set an appointment. He says he's too busy at the temple to be home taught. Funny, I don't recall the Prophet ever saying that temple work was more important than home teaching. I also don't recall him saying that bishops are too busy with tithing settlements and can't bother to conduct personal interviews.

Rights are inherent

Editor:

In response to "Supreme Court Settled Abortion Issue," we would first like to point out that rights are inherent! We do not get our rights from government society, as many believe. Rights are not created nor can they be; they are given by God. The Constitution formed to protect our God-given rights. The Founding Fathers stated in the Declaration of Independence, "We are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights and that among these rights are life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness." Society, however big it may, does not have the authority to take the right of life from unborn human beings. We must protect the lives of unborn infants of healthy mothers. The nineteenth century South is a perfect example of what happens when "society establishes what rights they are going to grant whom and why."

Second, just because nine men on the Supreme Court made an incorrect decision in this matter, it does not mean that we shouldn't fight for what is right. The Supreme Court has changed their decisions over the years, and overturn this one.

We feel that it is the responsibility of all good men to fight for what is right, even if it does not seem to accomplish much. Remember Edmund Burke's statement, "that is necessary for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing!"

Why not two?

Editor:

I need to complain about this situation since I already talked to everyone that I need to talk to. planning to graduate with a double major and found that I cannot get two degrees.

That means I will graduate in one degree from department with double majors. I will not only cover all the requirements of two of the toughest majors in university, but also complete double extra-major requirements covering both mathematics and language in less than one-half years while working on campus. I spent amounts of time with both departments and cannot leave my name as a professor from the other department.

I don't feel justified that I won't be able to graduate with two degrees from two different departments at different colleges. I do not want to leave the impression that one department or major is better than the other because I had great teachers in both areas of study. I will definitely have long-lasting impact on my life. I just don't understand why BYU cannot award two degrees to those who complete all of the requirements. Why are we congratulated by professors from both departments? Why does BYU punish those who pursue their own interests in two different directions and complete requirements? If the BYU administration has any reasons why, I would like to know before I leave so can petition if I disagree.

Professor plays detective

Unknown artist's life studied

EGAN CORDON
Senior Staff Writer

Research doesn't have to be tedious. A BYU professor says she has had fun researching a little-known 19th-century woman painter.

Norma Davis, professor of Humanities, said she first discovered painter Florence Upton while she was visiting a collector friend who had an apartment in his home. Davis recognized the art piece as a quality and became intrigued, so she asked her friend about the painter. When she learned he knew nothing about Upton, Davis decided to do deeper research.

Davis said she was able to locate a 150-page biography on Upton, which was written soon after the artist's death in 1922. Davis used information from this biography to supplement other possible sources of information.

For example, Davis said she found Upton's old address in Englewood, the biography. When Davis looked up the address she found the house where Upton had lived had been replaced by an apartment building.

However, before the house was torn down, the manager of the apartment building was able to give her the name of the person who lived there. Davis found this name in a telephone directory and contacted the person. This person provided Davis with pictures and valuable information about Upton's house.

"It's a little bit like Sherlock Holmes," said Davis, commenting on her research.

Gradually, Davis has been able to gather bits and pieces of information on the artist's life. She said she has also located 90 of Upton's paintings, all of which are found in private homes. Davis estimated Upton painted 250 to 300 paintings, and, to her knowledge, none of Upton's paintings can be found in exhibits, museums or galleries.

Davis is currently working on a biography and catalog of Upton's works. She said, "I have to rebuild the whole woman."

Upton was born in 1873 in New York. When the artist's father died, she had to find some means to support her family, so she began writing and illustrating children's books. The books, which centered around a black doll named "Golliwogg," became extremely popular in Europe. Upton earned enough money from her children's books to put herself through art school in France. She also studied in Holland.

Davis said the private art academies of the time charged women twice as much money as men and only gave them half as much attention. Also, they didn't give women any criticism to help them improve their technique.

Forty percent of all art students at the time were women, the professor said, and of these women, seven to eight percent were able to later support themselves as artists.

In spite of her teachers' lack of attention and criticism, Upton excelled in her painting ability, said Davis. She was a very skilled painter; her work consists mainly of genre and portrait paintings. Upton is not better known, said Davis, because she lacked innovation — she didn't paint anything strikingly new. However, Davis would rank Upton's work "right up with other women artists of the time."

Upton never returned to the United States after she went to Europe, and she never married.

James B. McDonald, professor of economics and managerial economics, will speak in the Pardoe Theater, HFAC, at 8 p.m.

In a speech titled "Statistical Distributions: How Deviant Can They Be?" McDonald will investigate the application of statistical models in areas such as economics, engineering and finance.

"Statistical models were often developed in response to important scientific problems," he said.

McDonald has been with BYU since 1972, and last year he was selected as professor of the year for BYU by the Blue Key National Honor Society.

ASBYU purposes recognized

AMILLE GOODRICH
Senior Staff Writer

The purpose of this article is to inform the BYU student of the responsibilities and purposes of the different offices and explain what their offices do to serve the students.

Appointed and elected

There are three appointed officers and 10 elected officials of the ASBYU offices provide opportunities for student volunteers to gain useful experience and various skills serving on committees and participating in projects.

The following offices are appointed positions except for the ASBYU Presidency.

BYU President Jon Coleman and Executive Vice President Reed DeMordaunt make up the ASBYU presidency. They oversee all of the affairs of the ASBYU Executive Council, represent the student body in campus and let the administration know about student and concerns.

The office oversees the Executive Council, and like any other position, organizes and makes sure everything is running smoothly. We also sponsor Freshman Orientation and "Coming Home," said Coleman.

This year we had the canned food drive "Give a Helping Hand in Rivalry with the University of Utah which was successful."

There is an ASBYU President's Council of 50 students who provides input of general ideas about what's going on, and the programs provided by ASBYU are successful and tried to be open to students' suggestions as much as possible," he said. However, because of the way the system is structured, there is not an effective way to monitor the use of the students.

Better communication

BYU is presently working on a restructuring effort to set up a better communications system with the administration, in an attempt to more effectively let the administration know how students feel, he said.

ASBYU Public Relations Office, directed by Corey

Freebairn, works closely with media outlets like The Daily Universe, KBYU, Cougar Cable Network and off-campus media to foster better communication and relationships.

It strives to communicate progress, decisions and changes in ASBYU to the campus community by promoting programs and fostering unity within the ASBYU offices.

"We do more than work with the media. We work on inter-office relationships between the offices of student government and how they represent the student body," Freebairn said.

"We are also responsible for the 'Y' Guy in The Daily Universe and the Unforum, an end-of-the-year student assembly that highlights the past year and news events in an attempt to give students a good feeling about BYU."

Legal system

The ASBYU Attorney General's Office regulates the activities of the ASBYU legal system, counsels student government, oversees the student judicial system, conducts investigations into university policies and practices, and provides the university and students with a system of justice and process of appeal.

"Our main service is the traffic court where students can appeal a citation they feel is unfair. The court consists of prosecutors, defenders and judges who are all students," said Susan White, ASBYU attorney general.

"We also work with University Police on crime prevention, assault prevention seminars and fingerprinting of children. Our office sponsored the Crimebusters video that is shown on Cougar Cable," she said.

White serves as an advisor to the Executive Council to make sure the offices are following the ASBYU Constitution and By-laws, she said.

Ombudsman office

The Office of the Ombudsman acts as an impartial mediator in conflicts involving a member of the university community. The Ombudsman's Office strives to solve problems in areas of consumer, university and legal matters as well as to educate students in the managing of their affairs and rights.

"We mediate problems like landlord-tenant relationships, grade disputes, zoning conflicts and strive to solve things students can't get done themselves," Ombudsman Spencer Dixon said.

"We also research problems to find out what rights exist for each party, negotiate and try to find solutions," he said.

The Ombudsman's Office has access to information concerning university policies, taxes, Provo City ordinances, consumer guides, financing, zoning ordinances, traffic rules and regulations and others.

Tax forms are currently being distributed by the Ombudsman's office in the ELWC Stepdown Lounge.

Cast members practice for "Could You Leave the Door Open?" an original musical written by three BYU students premiering this Thursday at the Margetts Arena Theater, HFAC.

Musical explores forgiveness, love

By KELLENE RICKS
Universe Staff Writer

"Could You Leave the Door Open?" an original musical written by three BYU students, will have its premiere performance this Thursday at the Margetts Arena Theater in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

According to director Robert Nelson, the play is about learning to "forgive oneself and learning to acknowledge and to love the whole self — weaknesses as well as strengths."

Playwright Jeff Hardy agrees. "At first the play was about escape, then it became more about . . . forgiveness and accepting blame."

Reed McCollm, a theater major and the second playwright, hopes the play will give the audience "assurance that when we are confused, it's not so strange."

Playwright David Morgan, wants the audience to take away whatever they can see in their own lives.

"Not everyone will be able to relate with a brother going insane, but they will be able to relate with family."

The scenario takes place in a deserted house and finally moves into the lead character's mind, "the world of the imagination," Morgan said.

"Because it's set in the imagination of the lead character, David, it's a challenge to the audience to relate to a play not set in conventional style," said McCollm.

"This show by nature kind of defies a lot of traditional structure," added Hardy. "We're breaking rules and it's hard to know which rules to break and which ones not to break. We're inviting people into a world not built by rules they're used to."

'American Michelangelo' leaves artwork world-over

By KAELEN MARIE REVERSE
Universe Staff Writer

When world-renowned LDS sculptor Avard Fairbanks died at the beginning of this month, he left a rich storehouse of artwork.

Fairbanks' mark can be seen all over the world with Angel Moroni sculptures atop the Washington, Seattle, Mexico and Jordan River Temples. He is noted for his busts of Abraham Lincoln, George Washington, Woodbridge Nathan Ferris and dozens of other sculptures dealing with family, peace, and goodwill.

Maude Fox Fairbanks, wife of the late sculpture, said in Italy, Fairbanks was known as the "American Michelangelo."

"My husband was known as the world's greatest sculpture of his time."

Not only was he a great artist, but a great religious man. If he wasn't studying his art he was doing the work of the Lord," she said.

Prior to his death, Fairbanks was in the process of forming a museum for this work. Presently his sons and sons-in-law are finishing the project.

They are moving his work into the building now so it won't be long before it is finished, said Mrs. Fairbanks.

In 1985, Fairbanks completed a heroic-sized bust of Abraham Lincoln which was unveiled by Senator Orrin Hatch in Washington D.C. and displayed in the U.S. Capitol. Carved

The theater production started out as a one-act play written and performed for a mask club, said David Morgan, a BYU graduate in theater and cinematic arts.

During the summer of 1985, Jeff Hardy, a roommate of Morgan's and a senior in musical composition, worked on writing the music he felt in each character. "I heard the music the second I saw his one-act," Hardy said.

Hardy and Morgan worked on expanding the one-act into a full two-act play and preparing it to submit to BYU's Playwrighting, Directing and Acting Workshop (PDA).

"There were approximately twenty plays submitted to PDA," Morgan explained. "Six or seven plays were chosen. Among them was 'Door.' At this time 'Door' was so disjointed you couldn't understand it. They gave it back to us and told us to give it a little more structure."

It was clear the play needed a full production, Nelson said. Therefore it was scheduled for performance during the regular theater season.

"It has been the collaboration of a whole bunch of really gifted young people — writers, actors and designers," Nelson noted.

Trent Bright will take the part of David, with Marvin Payne, Helen Beaman, Brian Lives, Shellie Eves and Robert Cornilles rounding out the cast.

In addition to opening night on the 29th, 'Door' will be performed January 30, 31; February 3 through 6; and 10 through 14 at 7:30 p.m. Matinee performances will be on January 31 and February 9 at 4 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at the Theater Ticket Office, HFAC.

out of rose marble, this was one of Fairbanks last projects.

However, this was not the last piece to be unveiled before his death. On Nov. 18, 1986, Fairbanks donated one of his last pieces to the College of Family, Home and Social Sciences at a lecture series paying tribute to long-time friend and passed dean of the college, Virginia F. Cutler.

In an interview with Ruth Brasher of the Family, Home and Social Sciences College, she told of the events that led to the night of the unveiling.

"Dr. Fairbanks had anticipated the piece to be done in 1985, however when the piece was ordered a year prior to its completion, the two-ton piece of Portuguese rose marble had been stolen," said Brasher.

Setting him back a year, the piece was completed in the fall of 1986. The night before the unveiling, Fairbanks delivered the piece to the college. With workers wearing white gloves, using slings and pulleys, they placed the piece atop its pedestal, she said.

The sculpture of a woman who has dedicated her life to doing more than the best she can, by a man who has left his mark the world over with sculptures that bring beauty and peacefulness, have left their tracks on BYU campus said Brasher.

A name plate is in the process of being completed with a new pedestal for the rose marble bust to rest on.

Reeves leads JV scoring

KEVIN J. NIENDORF
Universe Sports Writer

When most people get together to talk about the game of basketball, they usually talk about the coaches, the players, and the great shots and unusual plays. However, for those who are following the BYU junior varsity basketball team, one will usually find them talking about David Reeves.

The 6-3 freshman guard is one of the best players the city of Provo has ever produced for the Cougars. His aggressive shooting ability has caught the eye of not only his fans but also the area coaches.

"He's a great shooter," said BYU junior varsity Head Coach John Hansen. "He has really come on in the last two games." The lanky 160-pound guard averaged 24 points in each of the two games previous to last night's game against Dixie, which included a game against the third-ranked junior college team in the nation.

During his senior year of high school, he averaged 22.3 points per game and shot 56 percent from the field. He led his team to the state championship, which they lost, but he scored 20 points. Reeves credits his above average shooting percentage to the fact that his dad gave him and his own team to shoot the ball.

"My dad taught me how to shoot when I was little, and he lowered the net so that I never shot from the back," said Reeves. "I've always shot above the head."

Apparently, his dad's advice has been tested and proven, nonetheless, it gives some advice of his own. "You've got to be a smart player, making few mental mistakes," said Reeves. "All of the guards at BYU are good shooters."

Hansen believes Reeves will be a great player with maturity, needing time to fill out and time to gain confidence. Reeves agrees and plans to spend that time while serving a mission plan to go in April," said Reeves. "It doesn't matter where I serve, the work is the same. I just hope to gain weight," he said.

Reeves' other interests include swimming and architecture, and someday coaching basketball. Both professions would be benefited with his decision, he has the talent in his hands and the knowledge necessary to be successful at either of them.

"If he wants it and keeps working hard at it, he'll be a good player," said Hansen. "He has the tools, he just has to want it bad enough."

David Reeves is the kind of player BYU and its fans are looking for. Fortunately for them, they will more than likely see him in the future as a valuable asset for BYU.

And when people sit down to talk about the game of basketball, they'll still be talking about David Reeves.

Cougar JV falls to 2nd-ranked Dixie

By KEVIN J. NIENDORF
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU junior varsity basketball team lost its second straight game in a 101-91 decision to No. 2 ranked Dixie College Tuesday night in St. George. Undefeated Dixie moved its record to 20-0, while the Cougars are now 7-5.

"Our offense struggled," said Head Coach John Hansen, "we just haven't practiced that much against the full court press."

Forward Jeff Christensen scored a season high 32 points and grabbed some key rebounds. "He played a great game," said Hansen. It was the third time the 6-foot-3 inch junior from Fountain Valley, Calif., has been the high scorer of the game this season.

Craig Lewis contributed by scoring 19 points and by playing tough defense. Alan Astle scored 17 points, despite being keyed on and double-teamed throughout the game.

"It was a run and gun game," said Hansen. "They pressed us most of the game and that hurt us."

The capacity crowd was a factor in the win for the Rebels, said Hansen. "It was a good game and a good crowd."

The Cougars will take a short break before playing their next game on Feb. 5 against the Southern Utah State College junior varsity in the Marriott Center. In their last meeting, the Cougars won the game by 17 points but are looking for them to be tougher the second time around.

Nonetheless, the Cougars will try to reverse their losing streak and win their four remaining games.

One of those games will be against Dixie in the Marriott Center. It will be the last chance for the junior varsity to knock off a top-five team in the nation.

At midseason, 'Y' tops WAC

The WAC basketball season is now half over for all teams in the conference with the exception of Air Force, which still has not played Wyoming or Texas-El Paso. All other teams have played each other once, so the conference schedule is on the downswing.

At the midpoint, BYU stands alone at the top of the heap, but there are four other teams that have a legitimate shot of overtaking the Cougars before the season ends, and another team that may spoil some teams' chances at the title.

Preseason prognostications by the media in general, The Daily Universe

BYU Junior Varsity Guard David Reeves is a great shooter, according to JV coach John Hansen.

Swim team at Vegas

By HANS WILD
Universe Sports Writer

Coach Stan Crump is taking all of his 17 available women swimmers to the sixth annual UNLV Rebel Classic, a coed meet that is usually one of the largest in the West.

The Cougar paddlers will be among nine teams competing in the Buchanan Natatorium in Las Vegas Thursday through Saturday.

BYU's women's and men's teams have just come off a dual meet in which they dunked the University of Washington 123 to 83. "I am not surprised that we won, but I am surprised that we won so far. We have gone over a month since our last dual meet, and we were hungry. I have to hand it to the kids — they're hot", Crump said.

The Rebel Classic is a nonpressure type meet which will allow the team to concentrate on individual events and also give them a chance for a little fun. "We're going to have a good time and get a little sunshine," Crump said.

The men's team will be without the services of sophomore Terry Livingston. Livingston, who specializes in the IM and breaststroke, will be in Quebec at the Canadian Nationals where he will try to qualify for this summer's Canadian University Games squad.

The Rebel Classic preliminaries will begin every day at 10:00 and finals start each evening at 6:00.

Depression can cause 'great strain'; specialists to address topic at seminar

Three specialists will speak at a seminar on geriatric depression this week. The seminar will be Wednesday, Jan. 28, at 7 p.m. at Riverwood Hospital in Provo.

Psychiatrist Delbert Pearson will speak on bio-chemical depression, psychologist Ken Harris will speak on how depression is treated by psychotherapy, and social worker Dennis Hansen will discuss symptoms of depression.

According to Pearson physical causes for depression can be ruled out. But depression can cause some physical problems such as heart attacks.

"Depression is a great strain on the cardiovascular system," said Pearson, medical administrator of adolescent services at the hospital.

Symptoms of depression can appear as complaints about other health problems. Tension headaches, weight gain or loss and even constipation can be related to depression in the elderly.

The seminar is free and open to the public. No pre-registration is required.

DISASTER INSURANCE

If you're in business, you've got to plan for the unexpected. Whether rain or snow or the dark of night, or layoffs, or plant closings, or changing fashions, or parking problems, or any of the myriad of challenges that beset and threaten the small business owner, you've got to be prepared.

That's why when you plan your advertising, you've got to include the Daily Universe. Advertising to a select market of college students can do wonders for insulating your business against whatever local problems may come up. It also means you're tapping into the enormous cash flow the BYU community brings to Utah Valley.

So no matter what the wind may bring, you can stand prepared, knowing your business can survive, with a little bit of luck, a lot of hard work, and advertising in the Daily Universe.
